

ABSTRACT

[0025] An apparatus and method for controlling gain characteristics in a CMOS imager and for calibrating light intensity and analog to digital conversion in a pixel array. A mask with varying sized apertures is provided over pixels of an array outside the active area for use in intensity adjustments and calibration.